

Edmonton Financial Literacy Network Grows

Vibrant Communities Edmonton has long been involved with financial literacy - helping working people learn how personal financial planning and wise money management decisions can help them build better lives for their families.

Recently, there has been a groundswell of support and participation in a network that grew out of the earlier projects. In October 2009, almost 200 people attended a Financial Works conference and a recent Financial Information Fair attracted 150 people, with more planned for other Edmonton neighbourhoods.

The Financial Plu$ Asset Building Collaborative now has 50 members, including reps from three levels of government and a credit union as well as nonprofit organizations, and a western Canada network is forming. Learn more about the conference and network here.

